
Ample Metal Ray5 !!TOP!!

Realistic fingering and string handling . A series of sounds for both the fret and bridge on all five strings . Use the low-end control lever to adjust the tone and depth of the bass . The Ample metal Ray5 is a virtual electric bass, based on the original Stingray 5 sound, released back in 1991, and the prototypes from Music Man. The two traditional companies have released tablatures with this electric sound for over 25 years now, and in the last year, Ample have sampled the basses to recreate the sound. This is a library that is designed to provide the most realistic reproduction of Stingray 5 ever, although it is not a direct recreation. It is based on the original sounds, it has been sampled with a Sonic Electronix Life listening panel and a load of expensive gear, including the legendary Fender Rhodes piccolo piano: a Univox Bass Explorer, . Stingray 5 looks like this: And it sounds like this: And this is the Ample Metal Ray5 library: This bass uses a MIDI file to change all the strings, so you can program it to be any song you want . This also includes a MIDI file with both a tabulated bass, and score: Or you can create a song or a chord progression using the chords and the tab. This library is brand new, it has only been released very recently, . It includes the following tabs: Verse Bass Groove Bass It has all the same sounds, but in a dynamic/guitar heavy way.

Appendix E - MIDI Please note, that at the moment, the MIDI information for this library is not on-line . Sorry for the delay in the update. I have been using it for a month or two and when it comes to production, it is a lot of fun. I have mapped keys across all 5 strings and they add life to the music . Also, in all the images, the tab area is the letter names . So if you're using the tab, you know where to go and hit with the song. I'm sure there are some people who like to use the tab that have never used basses before . I have now created a new tab, using the guide tab for the five strings: And a new tab using the guide tab for the strings: I hope you like it .
